If you are suspended for assault in the 2nd, 3rd, or 4th degrees, DMV cannot issue you a hardship permit if within the ten years before applying for the permit, you were convicted of certain crimes, such as reckless driving; DUII, criminal driving while suspended or revoked, etc. This does not apply if the conviction(s) was from the same incident that caused your current suspension. To find out if you are eligible for a hardship/probationary permit, call DMV Customer Assistance at (503) 945-5400.

What Next?

The Driver Suspension Unit will review your application and notify you of any additional requirements you must complete before a permit can be issued. The hardship/probationary permit application is processed at DMV Headquarters. DMV field offices are unable to issue a permit. Once your permit has been processed and issued, DMV mails you a restriction letter. Take the restriction letter to a full service DMV field office to obtain a restricted operator's license. Your driving privilege will not be valid until you have obtained an operator's license with a "J" restriction code.

Note: When you apply for a restricted operator's license at a DMV field office, you will be asked to report any medical issues that affect your ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. If you have a medical condition or impairment that makes you unable to drive safely, DMV will not issue you a license until you have passed DMV tests and/or received medical clearance.
